+ As a company based in Roppongi, do you see any local networking opportunities with other tech companies?

As a company providing collaborative communication technologies, we have eco-partnership systems where we meet up under a certain theme and partner with startups having cutting-edge technologies to create new services and businesses. These startups come together via introduction (word of mouth), some companies we funded ourselves and others may be our partners. Mitsui Fudosan, the company managing Tokyo Midtown have their own website aimed to activate communication and build real businesses between tenant companies as well.

+ Have the collaborative environment in Roppongi lead to any projects ?

Since we wanted to create a way for people to be more engaged with Roppongi, we developed a “Workers App” with Tokyo Midtown which provides information updates regarding the facility and coupon offers for 10,000+ people having offices in Tokyo Midtown. We analyze who, from which company is viewing what type of content, or using what type of coupons and utilize that behavior data so that tenants in Tokyo Midtown can optimize marketing efforts. It develops an environment to manage an effective PDCA cycle. We believe it is beneficial for both the tenants and customers visiting Tokyo Midtown.

In the upcoming future, we want to further develop the infrastructure to connect a range of facilities within Roppongi to generate a better user experience for all visitors.

+ What are the benefits of hosting an event in Roppongi?

When you look around Tokyo to seek a destination having good conference rooms, a selection of quality hotels, a sense of hospitality and entertainment all in one place, you realize that Roppongi is one of the very few that fulfills them all. Guests can benefit greatly at Roppongi because it has a diverse and rich culture in a compact area. When we invite international guests to Japan, many of them say they “want” to come to Roppongi. I’ve experimented with hosting events outside of Roppongi as well, but I end up coming back to Roppongi.
